

Giving Liquid Bad Tasting Plant Drugs to Pets and Livestock

Dogs are easy:

1. Cut up a slice of bread into 1 inch squares. Keep them in a baggie in the refrigerator to keep them fresh.
2. Keep a pound of raw ground meat in the refrigerator and a back up pound in the freezer.
3. At medicine time make a thin patty of the ground meat and place a bread square in the middle of the patty.
4. Measure the liquid dose and put it on the bread where it will quickly be absorbed.
5. Roll the bread, with the medicine, up in a meatball and throw it to your little buddy who all the time you are preparing the dose will be jumping up and down in anticipation of the “treat” you are preparing.

You have turned a troublesome treatment into a treat!

Cats are easy:

Mix the appropriate dose with fish oil and mix it thoroughly with wet meaty cat food.

Livestock:

You can mix the dose with a small amount of sweet feed or simply drench the animal.
